

The book was found

East West Street: On The Origins Of "Genocide" And "Crimes Against Humanity"

Synopsis

â œA monumental achievementâ |a profoundly personal account of the origins of crimes against humanityâ and genocide, told with love, anger and precision.â • Â "John le CarrÃ©â œA narrative, to my knowledge unprecedented.â [It] should not be ignoredâ by anyone in the United Statesâ or elsewhere.â • Â Â "Bernard-Henri Levy on the front cover of The New York Times Book Reviewâ Â œExceptionalâ |has the intrigue, verve and material density of a first-rate thriller.â •Â Â "The Guardianâ œAstonishingâ |An outstanding bookâ |A story of heroes and loss.â •Â Â "The New Statesman A profound and profoundly important bookâ "a moving personal detective story, an uncovering of secret pasts, and a book that explores the creation and development of world-changing legal concepts that came about as a result of the unprecedented atrocities of Hitlerâ ™s Third Reich. East West Streetâ looks at the personal and intellectual evolution of the two men who simultaneously originated the ideas of â œgenocideâ • and â œcrimes against humanity,â • both of whom, not knowing the other, studied at the same university with the same professors, in a city little known today that was a major cultural center of Europe, â œthe little Paris of Ukraine,â • a city variously called Lemberg, LwÃ³w, Lvov, or Lviv. The book opens with the author being invited to give a lecture on genocide and crimes against humanity at Lviv University. Sands accepted the invitation with the intent of learning about the extraordinary city with its rich cultural and intellectual life, home to his maternal grandfather, a Galician Jew who had been born there a century before and whoâ ™d moved to Vienna at the outbreak of the First World War, married, had a child (the authorâ ™s mother), and who then had moved to Paris after the German annexation of Austria in 1938. It was a life that had been shrouded in secrecy, with many questions not to be asked and fewer answers offered if they were. As the author uncovered, clue by clue, the deliberately obscured story of his grandfatherâ ™s mysterious life, and of his motherâ ™s journey as a child surviving Nazi occupation, Sands searched further into the history of the city of Lemberg and realized that his own field of humanitarian law had been forged by two menâ "Rafael Lemkin and Hersch Lauterpachtâ "each of whom had studied law at Lviv University in the city of his grandfatherâ ™s birth, each considered to be the father of the modern human rights movement, and each, at parallel times, forging diametrically opposite, revolutionary concepts of humanitarian law that had changed the world. In this extraordinary and resonant book, Sands looks at who these two very private men were, and at how and why, coming from similar Jewish backgrounds and the same city, studying at the same university, each developed the theory he did, showing how each man dedicated this period of his life to having his legal conceptâ "â œgenocideâ • and â œcrimes against humanityâ •â "as a centerpiece for the prosecution of Nazi war criminals. And the author writes of a third man, Hans Frank, Hitler's personal lawyer, a Nazi from the earliest days who had destroyed so many lives, friend of Richard Strauss, collector of paintings by Leonardo da Vinci. Frank oversaw the ghetto in Lemberg in Poland in August 1942, in which the entire large Jewish population of the area had been confined on penalty of death. Frank, who was instrumental in the construction of concentration camps nearby and, weeks after becoming governor general of Nazi-occupied Poland, ordered the transfer of 133,000 men, women, and children to the death camps. Sands brilliantly writes of how all three men came together, in October 1945 in Nuremberg: Rafael Lemkin; Hersch Lauterpacht; and in the dock at the Palace of Justice, with the twenty other defendants of the Nazi high command, prisoner number 7, Hans Frank, who had overseen the extermination of more than a million Jews of Galicia and Lemberg, among them, the families of the author's grandfather as well as those of Lemkin and Lauterpacht. A book that changes the way we look at the world, at our understanding of history and how civilization has tried to cope with mass murder. Powerful; moving; tender; a revelation.

Book Information

Hardcover: 448 pages

Publisher: Knopf (May 24, 2016)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0385350716

ISBN-13: 978-0385350716

Product Dimensions: 6.7 x 1.4 x 9.5 inches

Shipping Weight: 1.8 pounds (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.6 out of 5 stars (See all reviews) (36 customer reviews)

Best Sellers Rank: #9,355 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #1 in Books > Law > Foreign & International Law #9 in Books > Law > Legal History #11 in Books > Biographies & Memoirs > Professionals & Academics > Lawyers & Judges

Customer Reviews

British International rights lawyer Phillippe Sands's new book, "East West Street: On the Origins of 'Genocide' and 'Crimes Against Humanity'", is a disjointed look at what I can only say are several interesting subjects, put together in one book. Sands - the maker of an excellent documentary - "What Our Fathers Did: A Nazi Legacy" - combines a look at his own family's flight from Vienna to Paris, the lives of the two men who coined the terms, "Genocide" and "Crimes Against Humanity", the life of Hans Frank (the "Butcher of Poland"), as well as the Nuremberg Trials. This is a lot to cover in one book, and the basis of it all is the town of Lemberg/Lviv/Lwow in today's Ukraine..Phillipe Sands' mother's family was originally from Zolkiew, a small town near the larger city of Lviv. His grandfather eventually left the area and moved to Vienna after WW1. It was there that he met his wife-to-be, and prospered as the owner of liquor stores. The family's story is the same as many others who were bullied and beaten after the Anschluss in 1938, but Sands' grandparents and mother were able to find safety of a sort in Paris and survived the war. Most of the other family members were killed in the camps or on the killing fields. But also from the Lviv area and growing up at the same time as Sands' grandfather were two men - Rafael Lemkin and Hersch Lauterpacht - both lawyers who were able to flee the Nazis. Lemkin eventually coined the word "genocide" and Lauterpacht, "Crimes Against Humanity". The use of both words - but in particular "genocide" - were used at the Nuremberg Trials. Another section of the book deals with Nazi lawyer, Hans Frank, who ruled over most of WW2 Poland.

In this book , author Phillippe Sands looks back to the city of Lviv, known as Lemberg (as well as many other names) and located variously in the Austro Hungarian Empire, Poland, occupied by the Soviets and, after 1944, part of Ukraine. Lviv, or Lemberg, was home to three men before the Second World War. One was the authorâ™s grandfather, Leon Buchholz. Another was Hersch Lauterpacht, a professor of International Law, born in Zolkiew, near Lemberg in 1877. The last was Rafael Lemkin, a professor and lawyer, born in 1900. Also, linked in to these menâ™s histories is Hans Frank, who spent two days in Lemberg in August, 1942. The authorâ™s grandfather never spoke of his time during the war, but Sands carefully unravels those years in this wonderful book and asks the questions he wishes he had asked his grandfather while he was still alive. Why did Leon travel to Paris, from Vienna, without his wife and daughter? Who was the woman who travelled with his, then infant, mother through a war-torn Europe? What happened to his family, left behind in Lemberg? When invited by the law faculty of the University of Lviv to deliver a lecture on his work involving crimes against humanity, he takes the chance to visit his grandfatherâ™s birthplace and investigate the events of that time and of the Neuremberg trials. He intersperses the stories of his grandfatherâ™s life with those of Lauterpacht and Lemkin. During the Neuremberg trials, Lauterpacht was part of the British prosecution team, while Lemkin was part of the American prosecution team. The two men changed international law, with the idea of â™War Crimesâ™ and, in particular, the inclusion of â™Crimes against Humanityâ™ and the idea of individual criminal responsibility and the protection of the individual.

Philippe Sands, QC (born 17 October 1960) was a lawyer at Matrix Chambers and Professor of Laws and Director of the Centre on International Courts and Tribunals at University College London. A specialist in international law, he appeared as counsel and advocate before many international courts and tribunals. He has written this very informative book on the origins of two powerful concepts in international law, 'genocide' and 'crimes against humanity' • as an intertwining of his personal family history in the city of Lviv/Lwow/Lemberg around the time of the Nazi General Gouvernement ruled by Hans Frank. The denouement of his history occurs in Nuremberg/Nürnberg at the famous trials of the leading Nazis, where both 'crimes against humanity' • and 'genocide' • first entered the judicial record. His family history wove around the lives of the creators of these concepts, Hersh Lemkin and Rafael Lauterpacht, both internationally recognized experts in international law who have still left a powerful influence. Sands provides a brief and unsatisfying personal view of their concepts at the end. This review focuses on his presentation of these two key concepts in international law, which is as tortured and intertwined as his family history. Quotations from the book are in boldface. He begins his history with Lauterpacht's first involvement with the 'Constitutional Court, bringing Lauterpacht into direct contact with a new idea, in Europe if not America: individuals had inalienable constitutional rights, and they could go to a court to enforce those rights. This was a different model from that which protected minority rights, as in Poland'. His thesis 'to use general principles of national law to strengthen international obligations' was published in May 1927, to great scholarly acclaim.

Download to continue reading...

East West Street: On the Origins of "Genocide" and "Crimes Against Humanity" Echoes of Violence: Letters from a War Reporter (Human Rights and Crimes against Humanity) Bull by the Horns: Fighting to Save Main Street from Wall Street and Wall Street from Itself The New Testament and the People of God/ Christian Origins and the Question of God, Vol.1 (Christian Origins and the Question of God (Paperback)) Spawn: Origins Volume 1 (Spawn Origins Collection) The Sacred Mushroom and The Cross: A study of the nature and origins of Christianity within the fertility cults of the ancient Near East War and Genocide: A Concise History of the Holocaust (Critical Issues in World and International History) Show Them No Mercy: 4 Views on God and Canaanite Genocide (Counterpoints: Bible and Theology) An American Genocide: The United States and the California Indian Catastrophe, 1846-1873 (The Lamar Series in Western History) War, Genocide, and Justice: Cambodian American Memory Work The Dance That Makes You Vanish: Cultural Reconstruction in Post-Genocide Indonesia (Difference Incorporated) Goodbye, Antoura: A Memoir of the Armenian Genocide Led by Faith: Rising from the Ashes of the Rwandan Genocide (Left to Tell) Genocide

(Groundwork Guides) They Can Live in the Desert but Nowhere Else: A History of the Armenian Genocide Did God Really Command Genocide?: Coming to Terms with the Justice of God Greater Middle East Region: Including Afghanistan, Pakistan, Libya and Turkey (Hammond Greater Middle East Region Map) Harley Loco: A Memoir of Hard Living, Hair, and Post-Punk, from the Middle East to the Lower East Side East o' the Sun and West o' the Moon (Works in Translation) East o' the Sun and West o' the Moon

Dmca